Maine’s downtowns offer special pleasures in winter and every month of the year

The winter months are a great time to visit one of Maine’s many historic downtowns to discover restaurants, shops and activities. Eating local and trying new microbrews are fun things to do with friends. New microbrews are in many downtowns including Gardiner, Skowhegan and Biddeford. The local food scene is equally as evident whether you eat at a local restaurant or visit one of the winter farmer’s markets that are in Waterville, Bath, Belfast or Brunswick.

Many museums, theaters and libraries are located in downtowns in beautiful historic buildings. These institutions offer performances and exhibits all year round. One of Maine’s unique features is being able to watch a performance in a historic theater space like Johnson Hall in Gardiner or the Strand Theater in Rockland. You can see world class art collections at the Bowdoin College Museum of Art in Brunswick, Colby College Museum of Art in Waterville and Farnsworth Museum in Rockland.

See a Maine downtown from a different perspective by taking advantage of walking trails, harbor walks and other trail systems that are connected to downtown. Get your exercise by walking, snowshoeing or skating right in the middle of downtown before you have that afternoon cup of cocoa. Look for trail maps or way-finding signs to access these wonderful trail systems.

Special events run all year long and the downtowns list their events on their web sites. You never know what you will find: Winterfest in Biddeford Feb 3-5th, Fourth Friday Artwalk and Trivia Nights in Belfast or the Annual Maple Festival in Skowhegan March 24-26. There is something going on in all of Maine’s downtowns.

Enjoy winter in Maine and explore our downtowns. Each offers a unique sense of place that you can’t get anywhere else and each season they provide their own signature activities. Shop, dine and enjoy what Maine is all about.
Welcome to Downtown Augusta

New businesses, new residences and a new program promise to see Augusta flourishing in the years ahead

BY MICHAEL HALL, DIRECTOR
Augusta Downtown Alliance
Special to the Sentinel & KJ

While 2016 was a banner year for the Augusta Downtown Alliance (ADA) in terms of new business and housing development, it appears that 2017 is already on track to outshine it. With new businesses celebrating their openings this coming year and the near completion of 12 market-rate residential units in the old Farrell’s building, the first few months of winter are looking bright, indeed.

New Apartments on Water Street Offer Stunning Views
Experience urban living at its finest at The Lofts at E.C. Allen. Located at 283 Water St. in Downtown Augusta, The Lofts at E.C. Allen features 12 new two-bedroom units each with individual HVAC systems, washer/dryer hookups, stainless steel appliances, granite countertops and elevator service. Eight of the 12 units have direct riverfront views with private balcony or deck access and all come with hard wood floors for the living spaces, and tile floors for the kitchen and bathroom areas.

“The views are what really drives this building,” said developer Richard Parkhurst. “The panoramic views of the Kennebec simply can’t be beat.” To receive a personalized tour of any of the available units, please contact Parkhurst at richardparkhurst@gmail.com or at 207-573-9390.

Downtown Yoga and Healing Arts located at 287 Water St. is the newest addition to downtown, and the area’s first-ever yoga studio. Offering classes for both novices and pros, Downtown Yoga is a wellness studio, as well as education center that provides services to keep the “whole” person healthy and living to the fullest potential, all while taking in tranquil river views in a historic setting.

Also opening recently in Downtown Augusta is Water Street Barbersalon. Located at 321 Water St., this barbersalon is a modern spin off the tried and true barbershop experience. Offering friendly, customized haircuts complete with hot towels and close shaves, Water Street Barbersalon definitely bridges the gap between the traditional and contemporary.

Celebrating their opening this past November, Fashions Quality Consignment, located at 190 Water Street, is another welcome addition to the downtown. Featuring women’s clothing as well as home furnishings and decor, this consignment shop is definitely worth a second look!

Otto’s on the River, a restaurant, will also celebrate an opening this coming year. Please be sure to “Like” each of these businesses on Facebook, or just stop in next time you’re downtown.

Small Business Development Program. Inspired by successful economic programs already in place in similar-sized cities around the country, Tipping Point promises to encourage greater retail and residential development through a two-pronged approach. This approach will include a 0% interest loan for 1/3 of the project cost (not to exceed $50,000) for new business development, as well as a grant of $2000 for every new, quality residential unit developed in the downtown area (not to exceed $25,000). This pilot program, which has already taken effect as of January 1, is now primed for applicants, promising more fundamental changes for Downtown Augusta.

For more information, regarding Tipping Point and how you can take advantage, please feel free to contact ADA Director Michael Hall at augustadowntownalliance@gmail.com.

Gardiner’s CoLab offers shared costs and creative connections

BY SUZANNE H. DOIRON
Volunteer with Gardiner Main Street

Gardiner Main Street recently expanded its Co-Working space, known as the “CoLab.” Users find a cooperative space with other professionals who share needs, motivation, and goals for their individual endeavors. The new and expanded Gardiner CoLab, 149 Water Street, is geared for businesses and individuals who seek energetic, flexible, and collaborative workspaces with minimal overhead expense.

The notion of a traditional office is changing, with co-working spaces popping up all over the country and for good reason. These office space solutions are adding a personal, communal touch. Gardiner CoLab offers a range of membership and space options, use of a business address, high-speed internet connection, access to a conference room, anytime access, and a completely different work experience.

The space is already working for its current members. GrowSmart Maine’s Nancy Smith and Tyler Kidder have been comfortably settling into their personal office space within the CoLab.

“As a small non-profit, we are always looking to be lean and reduce overhead and the CoLab has been crucial in establishing cost-effective and professional office space,” say Smith and Kidder. “It has been fun introducing our board and visitors to the concept of a shared workspace.”

Regular desk space members Liz Grady and Dani Scherer have very different careers, but they successfully share benefits of using the CoLab. Grady, a freelance rights clearance expert, moved to Gardiner after a long career with National Geographic. She now works for a variety of clients ranging from film production companies to the local PR firm, Shoe-string. The CoLab provides Grady with a space that offers a more professional atmosphere than her home office to work on her diverse offerings. When asked what she likes most about the co-working space Grady responded, “I enjoy the camaraderie, the exchange of ideas, the people and the atmosphere.”

Scherer, an adult educator and curriculum developer, with specialties in English as a second language, literacy instruction and agriculture-based refugee resettlement initiatives, enjoys the energy of professionals coming together in the space, completing great work. She is motivated by the concentration and focus of those around her.

“I wanted to find a place that is my own space relative to working with others. I was used to working with a lot of people around,” said Robert Saunders, CoLab’s artist-in-residence, who finds the space meets both his social and creative needs.

Working with others is not uncommon on a regular day at the CoLab. Home to a nonprofit working to keep Maine moving forward, a resident artist, freelancers seeking a comfortable place to work outside their home offices, and professionals who require a home-base when passing through the area. There is room for all who want to expand upon the idea of communal growth.

“They’ve always been incredibly cooperative, and immediately respond to any queries I have, and are always asking for feedback on how to make the space better,” said Grady, when asked about her experience utilizing the space.

“The Gardiner CoLab is more than just a space to work. It is a place to receive encouragement and support towards your professional, personal, and creative goals, it is a community of minds.

If you need a change of scenery in your professional life or want to take the next step in establishing yourself as a professional in your field, contact Gardiner Main Street info@gardinermainstreet.org or 582-3100 for a tour of the space and to learn about the membership plans available to meet your individual needs.

The new and expanded Gardiner CoLab.

Main Street Skowhegan volunteers are gearing up for Skowhegan’s 11th Annual Maple Festival, scheduled for Friday, March 24 through Sunday, March 26.

Celebrating Somerset County’s status as the top maple-producing county in the United States, this three-day festival of all things maple will help shake off the winter blues by offering fun activities and events for all ages.

A staple of the festival is the Saturday morning pancake breakfast featuring locally sourced foods, including, of course, Somerset County maple syrup.

“It’s an annual community-building event that has become important to folks in the area,” said Main Street Skowhegan Board President Matt DuBois. “Our volunteers work hard to get all the food prepared and on the tables.”

The weekend will also include a host of other maple-related events such as a maple leaf hunt, maple-marshmallow roasting, maple snow cones, and maple-sap collecting.

The event leads up to Maine Maple Sunday, March 25, when sugarhouses around the state open their doors to the public and offer free syrup samples and demonstrations on how pure Maine maple syrup is made. Many farms offer games, activities, treats, sugar bush tours, and more.

Visit MainStreetSkowhegan.org for more details as the event gets closer.

VisitSkowhegan.com shows why Skowhegan is a place to watch Looking for restaurants, lodging, or interesting things to do in Central Maine? Check out VisitSkowhegan.com, a new website Main Street Skowhegan created to showcase all that the Skowhegan area has to offer. Web-pages include Events, Kid-Friendly Activities, Outdoor Adventures, Local Food and Brew Explorations, and Arts, Culture, and History, plus comprehensive eatery and lodging listings, the town’s business incentive package, Skowhegan’s story and more. Main Street will continue to add content in the coming months, including shopping information and a community calendar.

Identifying Somerset County’s cultural resources

The Wesserunsett Arts Council (WesArts) and Main Street Skowhegan (MSS) are seeking help from Somerset County residents, students, visitors, and employees. With help from Reinholt Consulting, WesArts and MSS are working together on a plan for Somerset County that will identify the county’s cultural resources including those related to recreation, agriculture, the arts, community, the economy, and our heritage. Once identified, the information will be used to create a plan to best use those resources to promote tourism and boost the economy.

If you live, work, study, and/or spend time in Somerset County, complete the Public Opinion Survey, available online at ReinholtConsulting.com/Somerset-County. There is also an Artist & Performer Survey and a Creative Business & Cultural Organization Survey for those who fit those categories. You may fill out as many of the surveys as apply to you. Hard copies of the surveys are available at most libraries and town offices in Somerset County.

By completing the survey, not only will you provide important input into the future of Somerset County, you’ll also have an opportunity to enter a drawing for prizes donated by local businesses. Once the survey process is complete, the community will be invited to review the data results, suggested priorities and strategies. The community will also have the opportunity to help create and shape the Somerset County Cultural Plan. When the plan is complete, it will guide tourism development including the creation of recreational, food, and historical tours around Somerset County; development of new events and festivals such as performing/visual arts, music, and food events; and further enhance recreational assets such as the Kennebec River Gorge in Skowhegan, which is the proposed site for the Run of River Whitewater Recreation Area.

While it’s tempting to stay hunkered down inside our warm and cozy homes during the chilly winter months here in Waterville, it would be a shame to miss out on some of the most interesting arts and cultural opportunities that downtown Waterville has to offer during the first quarter of the year. From top-notch performances at the Waterville Opera House to free art exhibitions at Common Street Arts and eye-opening literary events at the Waterville Public Library, there is truly something for anyone hardy enough to brave the chilly air. The risk of pink cheeks and frosty eyelashes is well worth the reward, we assure you!

What’s more, the sounds of good friends laughing over libations and delicious food at some of our finest downtown restaurants will warm even the chilliest of nights and the most hardened of souls.

New shops and shopping experiences are waiting to be discovered along Main Street as well, with retailers ready and able to help you find that perfect Valentine’s Day gift for your loved one, whether they’re a time-tested sweetheart or freshly-discovered paramour. From Buddhas to diamonds to desserts, downtown is bustling with fresh sights and sounds in 2017.

The Waterville Opera House, a Waterville tradition for 115 years, offers an array of performing arts experiences to keep you entertained while you wait for the first robin of spring. Their new winter comedy, “It’s Only A Play” (January 27 – February 5) will have you and your friends in stitches, and we know you’ll be repeating the zingy one-liners the performance is known for over post-show martinis or suds at your favorite downtown eatery. While the Waterville Opera House is known for its strong community theater performances, they also bring some of the best theater and opera from around the world right here to Waterville through their broadcasts of The National Theater Live performances (Saint Joan, Kenneth

If music is more to your liking, the Waterville Opera House brings the strings with The Violin Femmes starring the high-energy rock stylings of Bella Electric Strings in March – this dynamic performance will have you clamoring for more when the curtain closes. Looking for family-friendly fun? Prepare to go under the sea as Disney’s “The Little Mermaid” comes to Waterville in March – this delightful tradition shines the spotlight on the visual arts programs of local schools, child care institutions, and home school groups while encouraging community participation and celebrating art created by our local youth.

While it’s tempting to stay inside, curled up with your favorite book when the icicles seem to spring from every eave, this winter the Waterville Public Library is offering a series of Maine-focused author events featuring some of Waterville’s most gripping reads including talks by author Michael Finkel (“The Stranger in the Woods: The Extraordinary Story of the Last True Hermit”) and local favorite Ron Currie (“The One-Eyed Man”). The Waterville Public Library, while known for its books, offers so much more for everyone, featuring art exhibitions by some of our most talented local artists as well as an engaging series of events for local youth and teens.

To learn more about these events and stay up to date on the latest activities in the greater Waterville region, we encourage you to visit the Waterville Creates! online arts calendar at WatervilleCreates.org as well as the Mid-Maine Chamber of Commerce’s online events calendar at midmainechamber.com.

So get off the couch, and get yourselves downtown. There’s more happening in Waterville this winter than you think! See you out and about on Main Street – we’ll be the ones grinning from ear-to-ear as we hop, skip, sip (and sometimes slip) from hotspot to happening.

We would hate for you to miss a minute of the fun!
